With which ethnic group(s) do you identify? Select all that apply. (required)

There is no scientific/biological basis for the idea of 'race'. However, in Canada, people are often identified by their colour and physical features, which can lead to racial bias, stereotyping, and discrimination. Ethnic groups have a common identity, heritage, ancestry or historical past, often with identifiable cultural, linguistic and/or religious characteristics.

The following categories reflect ethno-racial groupings that can help us understand the unique experiences of racial bias and inequity across diverse peoples. These categories are complex, and individuals may describe themselves differently from the categories listed.

- ☐ Arab
- ☐ Black
  (e.g., African, African-Canadian/American, Afro-Caribbean, Afro-Latinx, etc.)

Work & Labour Studies (BA)

Work & Labour Studies [↗]

Understand the rapidly changing world of work-and its impact on workers.

Join the only program of its kind in Canada and focus on how work and labour are changing in our global society. Discover how work influences how we live and think about the world, while exploring the complex nature of work and employment, the impact of globalization and the role of trade unions.

In dynamic courses with many hands-on opportunities for learning, you'll critically examine public policy, parliamentary process, automation, robotization, government programs and how these impact labour and work. Dive into critical ideas about occupational health and safety, and how climate change is impacting employment.

Many of our faculty are on the front lines of key public policy. As a graduate, you'll be well-prepared for employment in the labour movement, private industry, government service, journalism, public or private administration, social work, law or teaching.

What you'll learn

- Understand fields related to work and labour, and the core pillars of economic, social and political theory.

- Gain exposure to the intricacies of worker relations and questions about inequality, rights, workplace conditions requirements and ethics.

- Understand key legal questions surrounding work and labour relations in Canada and abroad.

Hands-on experiences

- Gain practical experience through co-op placements, including advocacy work with non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

- Access interactive courses that present experts from the field, and include role-playing activities, such as a mock parliament, and field trips to meet union and economic leaders.

- Participatein field trips to meet union and economic leaders.

- Get involved with the Global Labour Research Centre which sponsors conferences and workshops.
